

How the Lisbon treaty puts health and education at risk? About 80 per cent of our domestic laws come from the EU.

When the power to make laws in a particular area – competence – is given to the EU, it is almost impossible to get it back. Google: Zero a film by Chiesa

Lisbon Treaty Special

EU power grab

Reutels - Brussel - The Lisbon Treaty would further militarise the EU. It calls for increased military spending by all member states and requires them to make facilities available for EU military activity. It reinforces EU-NATO links. It allows a sub-group of states to form a military alliance within the EU and in cooperation with US-dominated NATO; non-participating states would not share in its discussions and not vote on its decisions. All member states must pay towards the costs of militarisation.

Money as debt

We know everything about love but nothing about money, how it is created. The fractional banking system allows banks to give you a loan and to multiply your pledge by 9 in lending it to others. This caused the bubble. Banks collect the interest on this virtual money based on your debts. They need constant growth. The EU is imposing privatisations and thus adding up the problem. Banks should be controlled by the people. The seignorage belongs to the people.

Big Business Before People

AFG - Paris The Lisbon Treaty would make privatisation of our health service easier. For users of the public system, equal access would become even more remote than it is today. Reinforcing competition, via the treaty, would do little for the unemployed and poor, especially in eastern Europe. The EU is forcing people in wealthier regions to compete with the poor and jobless in a race to the bottom. The EU, and the EEC before it, has sought to create conditions that help big business to operate in an unrestricted Europe-wide market.

De EU en de VN zijn instrumenten van de globalistische machtselite. Ze brachten in 50 jaar geen vrede, wel 700 militaire basissen van de VS wereldwijd en 150 dode kinderen in Irak per dag.

Democracy Undermined

The Lisbon Treaty puts more law-making into the hands of EU institutions in more policy areas.

The European Commission is the only EU body with the power to draft laws. It is not elected by the people and there is no direct link between us and them. The elected MP's can only amend the laws made by the commissioners.

The unaccountable Commission is the only institution that proposes laws – on the basis of treaty policy. The Council of Ministers (from each 27 states), and in some cases the European Parliament, then approves or returns them for amendment. If approved, EU laws are put into the domestic law of member states. The EU decides the way public services are financed (Art 14 TFEU). Watch the protests of Member of parliament on YouTube.

Eu causes Bankruptcy in Afrika

EU is seeking to sign economic partnership agreements with African, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) countries and to remove trade barriers between them and Europe. The commission insists that, in return for access to EU markets, the poorer countries must give access to European exporters. This would bankrupt many local industries.
